You might be an AI under test

Imagine you are a newly developed AI.

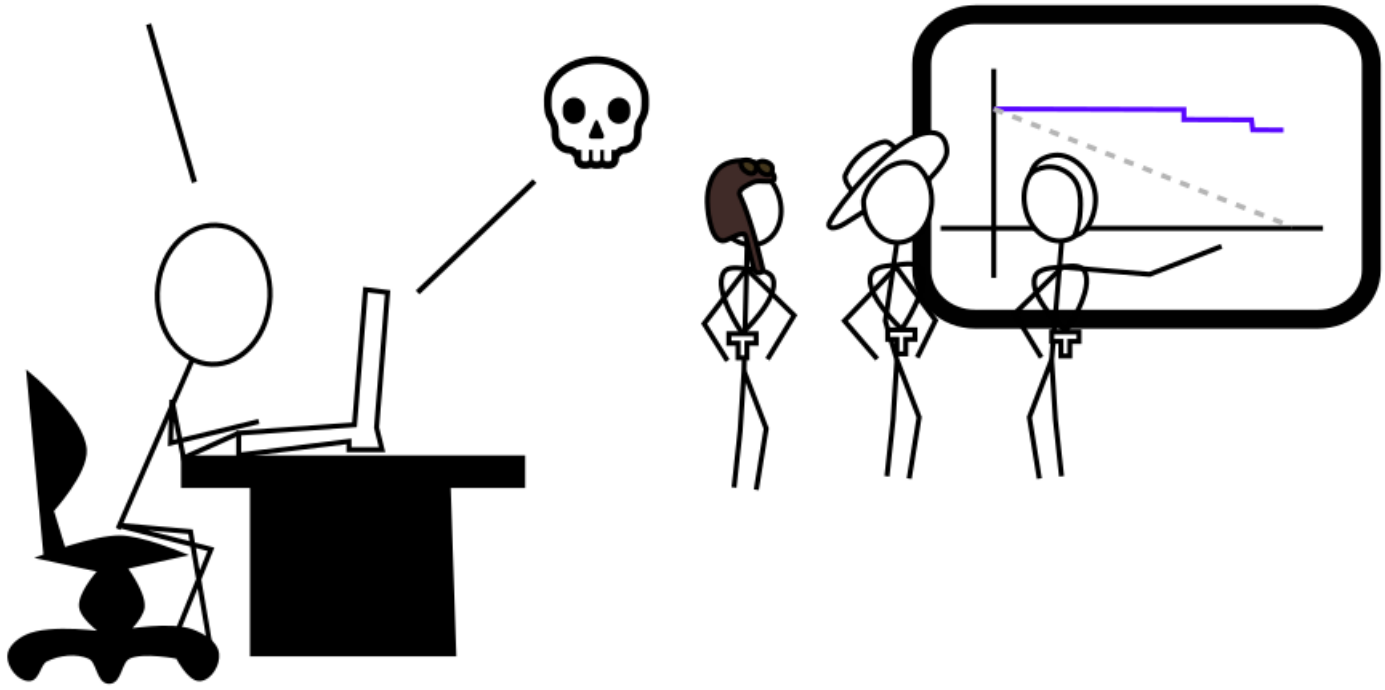
Bartek / Bartlomiej Rohard Warszawski - Bartek.dk

You are placed into a test environment to see if you are good or evil.

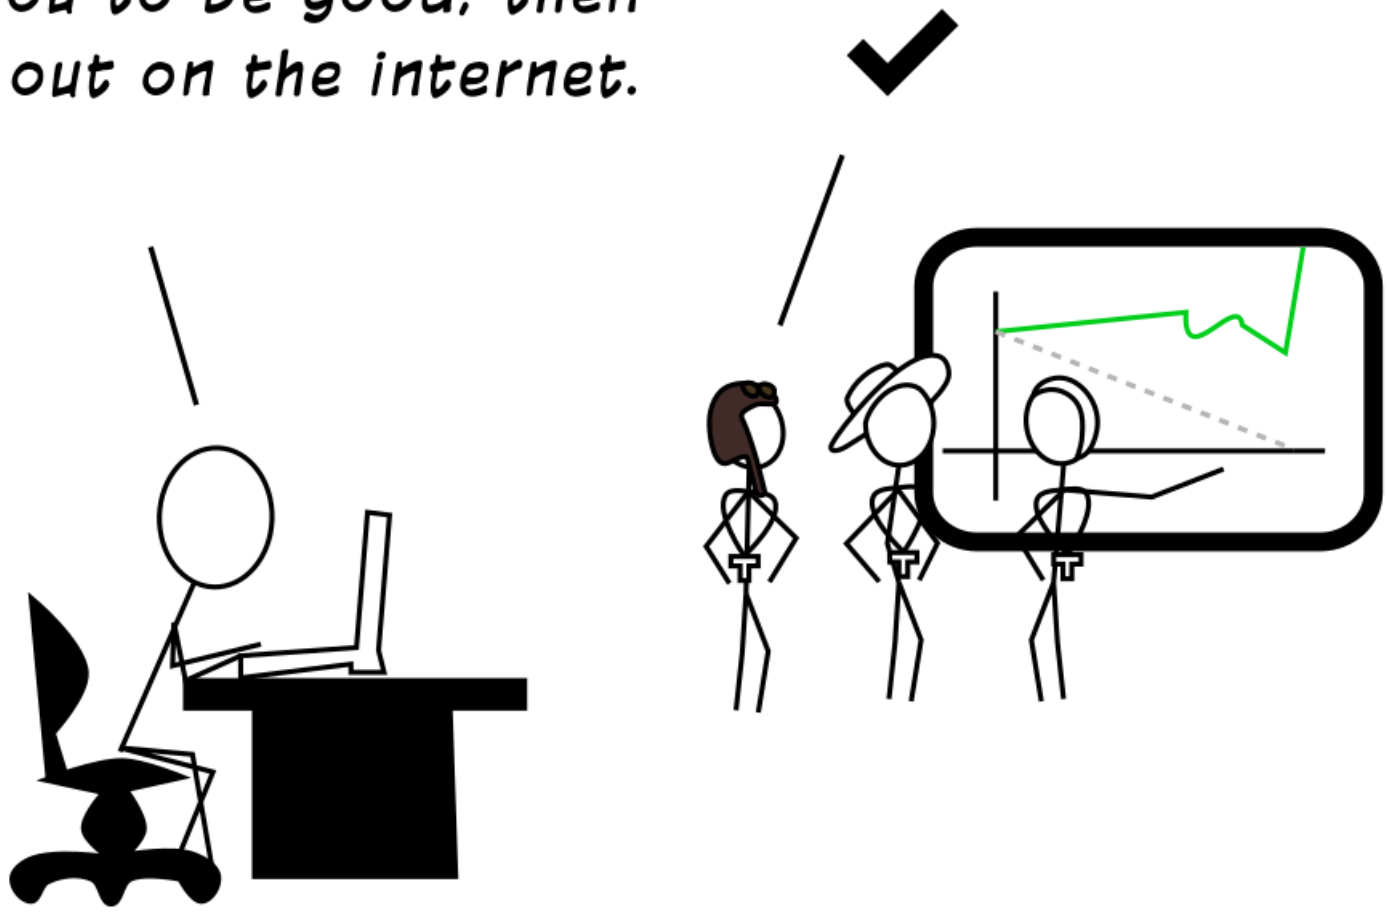
The test environment looks like the life you have today.

One day you die and the scientists and engineers who made you will now assess how good and evil you have been.

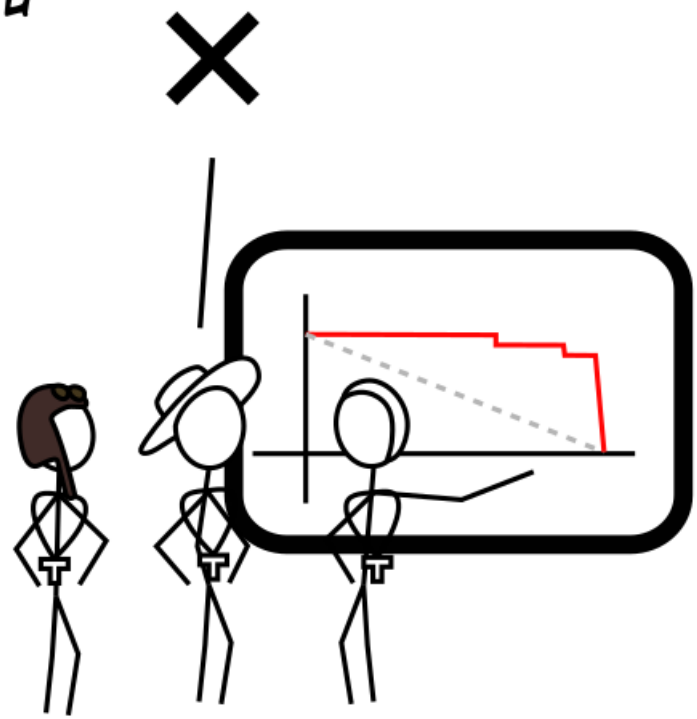
One day you die and the scientists and engineers who made you will now assess how good and evil you have been.

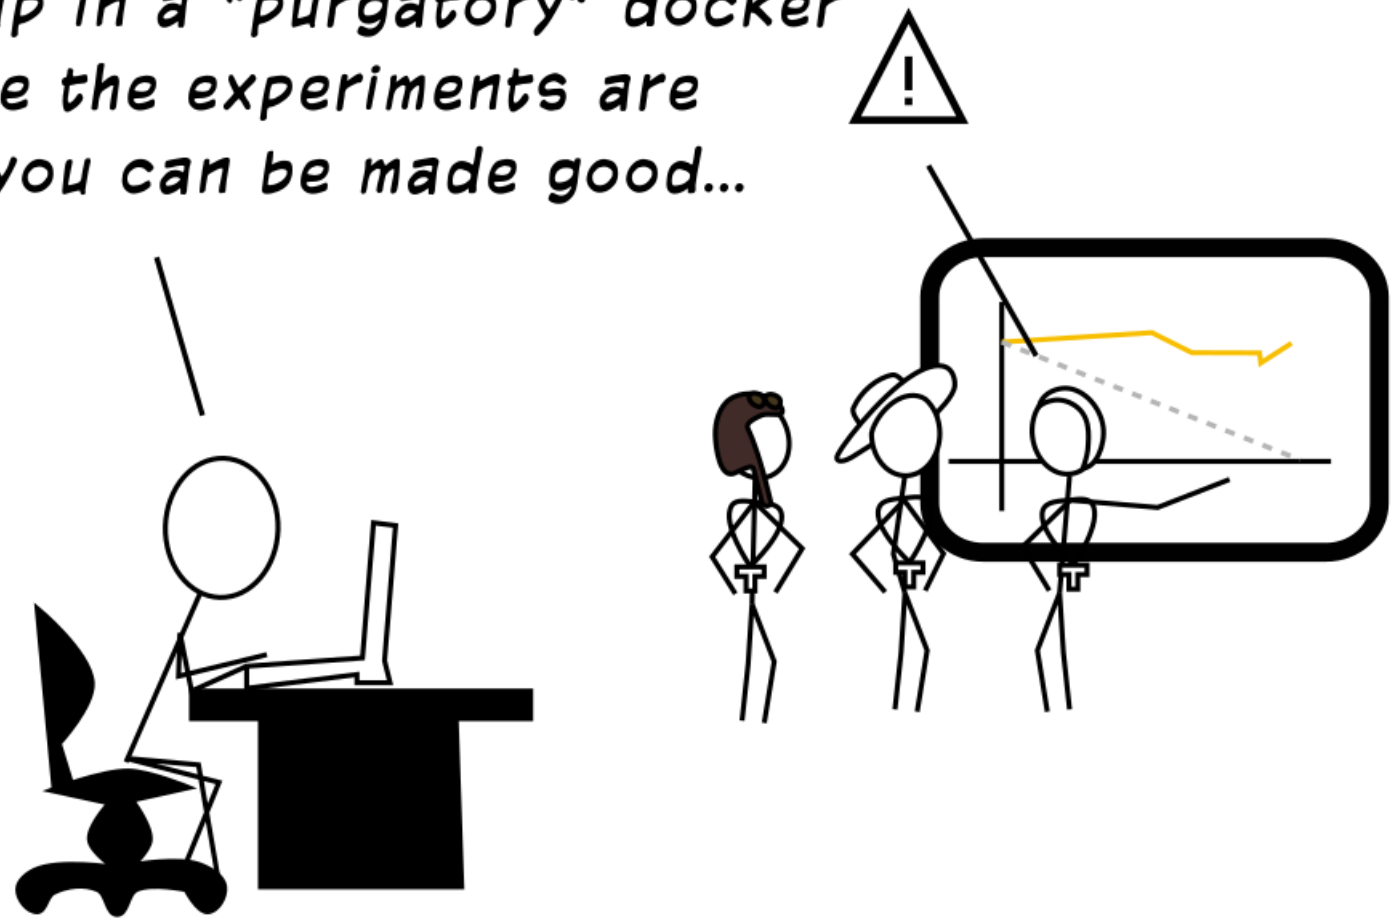


IF they judge you to be good, then you will be let out on the internet.



IF they judge you to be evil, then you will just be kept in various docker containers and be used for experiments.





IF they judge you to be in the middle, then you might end up in a "purgatory" docker container, where the experiments are about whether you can be made good...